From the Presidents Desk...

Hi fellow Beer Barons;

Hopefully most all of you have cleared the hurdles of Y2K without too much trouble. I personally had plenty of beer and pretzels for at least a month, enough time for the masses to go off the deep end, the World to end and all.

Any member of Beer Barons hoarding extra beer for this major disaster should call me or our club to help you with this extra beer problem. I wouldn't want the beer police to confiscate your high test booty.

Have any of you noticed the unusual style of brew for sale lately at the liquor stores? Try Tequila beer for instance. I tried it, light and tart with a Tequila aftertaste. If this is what the Industry of Beer Makers want us to drink, they are barking up the wrong beer truck. Beer and Ale are and always will be a product of water, yeast, barley or similar grain, hops or spice, but never hard liquor. Hard liquor is meant as a compliment to Beer and Ales.

Personally beer has always been a beverage I have enjoyed, changing season to season, with or without liquor. Our hobby needs to teach the public, and help them understand the diversity of the world's beers.

Many countries around the world have been brewing Beers and Ales dating back 400 – 500 years and more. Many styles are the same as their forefathers and ales wives made long ago. Beer made long ago defined their culture then and now.

We as U.S. citizens must form our own beer culture for the world to either enjoy or curse; More than likely to curse, as past history has shown us.

So in closing, go forth and spread the word of beer; we are the link between homebrewing or no

Brewing News

The Siebel Institute in Chicago has long been recognized as one of the premier places to get an education in the art and science of brewing. It has been providing brewing education for industry professionals since 1872. However, due to financial problems they were on the brink of shutting down.

In the nick of time an alliance was established with the Alltech company, a leader in the studying of fermentation as it applies to distilled beverages and fuel alcohol. Alltech will take over the day to day running of Siebel Institute.

It was announced that courses will resume in March under the current curriculum, with enhancements to come.

If you dream of a career in the brewing industry, Siebel is a great place to get yourself started.

Food and Froth

The Beer Barons teamed up with the Purple Foot to host a booth at the Food and Froth event at the Milwaukee Public Museum on February 5th.

We demonstrated the brewing of some beer, and poured out samples of homebrew. Many people expressed an interest in our hobby, and hopefully we will gain some recruits.

This event attracts many of the breweries in Wisconsin, big and small. Local restaurants are well represented, along with historical exhibits, etc.

The event was very well attended, with long lines at times at some of the food and beer tables from time to time.

This is a nice event for a good cause, worth making plans to attend next year.

Alehouse, Robert Wilbur of the Rothaus Brewing Co., and Russ Klisch of Lakefront Brewery.

Beer Baron members are welcome to assist in the judging. Experienced judges are needed, along with stewards, etc.

Entry forms and information are available at the Purple Foot, 3167 S. 92nd Street, (414) 327-2130. These will also be available at our February meeting.

Homebrew Judging

The February meeting will mark the return of Homebrew Judging to the Monthly meetings.

In the year 2000 these judgments will be held at Meetings when there is no speaker and occasionally at other times.

The format will remain similar to last year. Entries should consist of at least one bottle of beer, 12 oz or larger, in a plain unmarked bottle (preferably brown).

All beer will be judged according to the style which it is entered as. The AHA has agreed to judge beers according to the BJCP beer style guidelines, so we will also use those. The AHA and BJCP guidelines were very similar in most cases, so this is not a big change.

Entries will be accepted at the table where you pay your monthly meeting dues. We will have style guideline sheets available so that you can select the category for your beer when you enter it. There is no cost to enter your beer in these judgments.

Anyone who wants to develop skills in analyzing the taste of beer is welcome to join in the judging. No experience is necessary, but bring an open mind and a willingness to learn.

Join in the fun of Homebrewing.
